ing the drugged whisky, which in a short time threw him into a drowsy state. This being discovered, he was taken from the train at Lucy, and medical attention was summoned and the necessary remedies or antidotes to the poison administered. He was roused up and was whipped and walked around all the night long, by a number of young men who took charge of him and who were determined to save his life, if possible. A fiddler was secured and he was walked to musical airs of quick time. Yesterday when the train left Lucy he was some better, but was still in a most critical condition. The young man is most respectably connected, and the cause of the rash attempt at suicide is said to be a love affair.

"He only said, 'The night is dreary, she cometh not,' he said; He said, I am aweary, aweary, I would that I were dead.'"

Abstracts of Supreme Court Decisions. Nashville American, twenty seventh instant: "A typographical error occurs in the report of the case of Russell vs. Finney, administrator, reported February 20, 1878. The word "not" in the sentence 'The ax post facto intention will not give the right," is omitted.

SHERIFF'S DEED REGISTRATION. A deed to land made by a party and recorded pending the two years allowed him for redemption, which land had been prelevied upon and sold, is invalid against the sheriff's deed made prior to the expiration of the equity of redemption, though unrecorded. To this extent the registration acts do not apply. Such a deed would also be held to be one of land purchased lis pendens - Dromgoole vs. Spence, February 16

HOMESTEAD - ABANDONMENT. The abandonment of the homestead mus be absolute, voluntary, and permanent. Hooper lived upon a tract of land six miles from Murfreesboro, and, in order to be near his business, rented it out and moved into the town of Murfreesboro, resided there for two years in a rented house, and then moved back on his land. During his two years absence he made a deed of trust of it, in which his wife did not join. Upon a bill filed by her the homestead was allowed, the abandon ment being considered temporary Hoope vs. Harper, February 23, 1878.

INDICTMENT-FALSE PRETENSES. An indictment founded upon section 4701 written instrument under false pretences must specifically describe and set out the instrument of writing, if possible to be done, otherwise it will be fatally defective.—Wallace vs. State, February 2, 1878.

CHANCERY SALE-SURETY ON NOTES. The surety on notes given for land bought t a chancery sale cannot be freed from hi liability by averring or showing that his principal will not get a good title to the land bought. If the principal does not ask that the sale be set aside, the security cannot.— Lillard vs. Puckett, February 23, 1878. PROMISSORY NOTE-TITLE. The title to a promissory note may be passed without delivery of the note.—Gregory, adm'r, vs. Ross, adm'r, February 23 Eridence.-Evidence was permitted to s to the jury tending to show a transfer of th note, which was supposed to be destroyed b fire, with instructions from the judge that they were only to consider it as showing a transfer of the note and not the fact of its existence; held not to be error. - Ib.

AUTRE FOIS CONVICT. A conviction of assault and battery unde counts of an indictment, charging an assault with intent to commit murder, is a bar to a conviction under a count charging an intent to commit manslaughter.—State vs. Williams, February 23, 1878. JEOPARDY. The jeopardy in such case is always com-plete when a defendant is arraigned upor

the identical facts on which he had alread been tried, without reference to the technica designation of the crime of which he stand accused .- Ib. CONFESSION INADMISSIBLE. To tell the prisoner that "it will be better for him to confess" will render a confession thereafter made inadmissible, unless it is made to appear that the delusive hope or fear such promise or threat may have inspired was dispelled.—Brown vs. State, February 23 BASTARDY PROCEEDINGS-BOND. The defendant in bastardy proceedings cannot be imprisoned for a failure to give th bond required by section 5367 of the code to save the county harmless against the maintenance of the child. He may show by testimony satisfactory to the court that he is unable to give the required security.—State vs Gaither, February 23, 1878.

RETAXATION OF COSTS Per curiam-"It is competent for this cour to correct any improper or erroneous taxation of costs in cases determined in this court, and the clerk will re-examine the taxation complained of and report the facts in relation thereto, giving the former clerk (the party of adverse interest) notice of the time of making his report."—Hunter vs. Haynes, February
